

The NOI Leak Audit

One page. About 20 minutes.
Have your last 12 months of statements, the rent roll, and the utility bills in front of you.

Five levers raise net operating income on a small apartment building. In any given building two of them are usually carrying the loss, and the expensive part is guessing which two. One question per lever. Tick the answer you can prove from your own records.

LEVER	THE QUESTION	YOUR ANSWER
1 Revenue capture	Are all lease-permitted fees billed consistently, every month, on every unit? Late fees, pet rent, parking, storage, utility recovery.	☐ Yes, and I can show the ledger ☐ Some months, some units ☐ I do not know
2 Utilities	Have water or sewer bills risen more than 15 percent in any three consecutive months over the last 12? A rise that never reverses is a leak or a billing error.	☐ No, checked bill by bill ☐ Yes, and it never came down ☐ I have not compared them
3 Vendors	When were your top five contracts last competitively rebid? Landscaping, trash, cleaning, elevator or boiler service, insurance.	☐ Within the last two years ☐ Three years or more ☐ They auto-renew, I do not know
4 Turns	What is your average time from move-out to move-in, and who is tracking lease expirations 90 to 120 days out?	☐ Under 30 days, tracked ☐ 30 to 60 days ☐ Over 60, or nobody tracks it
5 Systems	Do you receive a monthly rent roll, profit and loss statement, and variance report, and do you read them within the week?	☐ All three, every month ☐ Some of them, some months ☐ Only when I ask

The rule: any question you cannot answer from your own records inside five minutes is already a finding. The missing answer tells you which lever to open first. Two or more answers in the bottom row means the building has a gap worth measuring before your next refinance or sale.

Size the gap

Run the free NOI Quick Check at apartmentwealthnavigator.com/tools/noi-check. Current NOI, the annual gap, and what it costs in building value.

Work one lever at a time

Days 1 to 30 revenue capture and utilities. Days 31 to 60 vendor rebids. Days 61 to 90 turns and the monthly reporting rhythm.

Get a read on your building

The first call is free. Send the address and your last 12 months of statements to shirani@enterprisere.com or book at apartmentwealthnavigator.com/get-started.